Supernatural; Raphael/Castiel; [song excerpt from A Perfect Circle's "The Noose"]

R, dark, dubcon, things go poorly for Castiel in this one.

Raphael has his hands around his neck, and Castiel can feel the hot edges of Raphael's Grace wrapped around his vessel, trapping him inside, and Castiel knows that all is lost.

But Raphael doesn't end him, not yet, and burns his skin before he pushes Castiel to his knees.

"Please me," Raphael rumbles, low and dark and all too close to a tone Castiel once heard from Lucifer, "And I might let you live."

He opens his pants, and Castiel: Castiel has learned from the Winchesters, from humanity. If he wants to rise again, defeat Raphael one day, he must know when to give in and do what he must to survive.

With tongue and lips he pleases Raphael, and with eyes closed he promises himself that there will be a tomorrow where he can make Raphael please him.